Hate is a virus, fueled by uneducated fear and a failure to see common bonds in one another.

We can combat bias and hate crimes in our city, one meal at a time.

Join the virtual relaunch of our Breaking Bread, Building Bonds initiative, as we organize at least 100 dinners across the city, virtual for now, with 10 everyday people, each representing various ethnicities, identities, and faiths.

Our goal remains the same: to have different groups from all over the city sit down with one another, learn from each other, and take those lessons back to their respective communities.

Breaking Bread, Building Bonds has been organized in partnership with the New York Peace Institute and The People’s Supper.
